An enclave of contemporary rest in buzzy Uluwatu

Although Uluwatu has become a vibrant enclave led by a crop of lifestyle-driven establishments, off the beaten path, another side awaits, one that preserves the region's charm. That's where one would find sprawling oases like Radisson Blu Resort & Villas, Bali Uluwatu, a departure from the crowd that persists in Labuansait. Many may know the resort for its 139 spacious rooms, designed with brise-soleil screens for an airy lift to its earth-toned contemporary furnishings. But its recent development added 11 private villas to the property's collection, following its rebrand as a Resort & Villas property, the first of its kind in the Asia Pacific region. Tucked away in its own secluded section, these villas epitomise the essence of a luxury escape. Whether the one- or two-bedroom options, each abode boasts its own glittering private pool that overlooks the ocean. Villa and resort guests alike are treated to the same excitements offered by activities and amenities in and around the property: Artichoke, Choka, and Filini Restaurant for dining; the fitness centre and tennis court for keeping active habits alive; and Spa ESC for some blissful unwinding.

Unforgettable stays in chic Seminyak

Seminyak has long been the de facto face of modern Bali, a neighbourhood where community, coast, and contemporary culture collide. Guests can feel that spirit with a stay at Blu-Zea Resort by Double-Six, finding its home just a short trip away from buzzy Seminyak Beach. Whether it's the cosy Superior Room, Deluxe Ground Floor Room, or the Junior Suite, travellers can settle into an accommodation that's equally chic, modern, and characterful. Snapshots of traditional culture can be seen through the woven fabrics accentuating modern furniture as well as paintings hanging over the headboards of plush beds. Beyond the rooms, the resort offers much to explore. There's the vine-draped, blue-and-white Pallas Greek Taverna, where guests can savour Mediterranean flavours in a warm and inviting dining space. The Spa also invites the weariest to let loose and unknot taut muscles earned from a day out exploring the island. The most impressive, though, is the four-tiered swimming pool complete with a man-made beach, ideal for laps and naps under the sun. Here's where guests can find The Beach Restaurant and the resort's two bars for refreshing libations to chase the heat away.

Teakwood sanctuary of style, understated luxury, and culture

Entering Rumah Rubah feels like leaving Bali behind for the remote Japanese countryside. It shouldn't come as a surprise when you know that this luxury villa was commissioned to be a second home for Maison Kitsuné co-founder Gildas Loaëc. This is apparent from guests' first welcome: two terracotta fox statues guard either side of the main entrance, an homage to traditional Balinese spiritual gates and the brand's canine mascot, inspired by the Japanese folklore belief of the animal's shape-shifting power. Past that is a sprawling acre-wide compound, though the villa itself takes up no more than 15 per cent of the land; the rest becomes grounds for foliage to unfurl, from centuries-old milkwood and Bodhi to sacred fig and banyan trees, each conjured by tropical specialist architect and Gildas' long-time friend, Maximilian Jencquel of Studio Jencquel. The three-bedroom villa is an all-teak splendour, aerated by coastal breezes that blow in through the many open-air spaces. Furnishings are made out of the same wood, including the 15-seater dining table where private in-house chef Deni Setiyowati would be serving dishes that draw upon local traditions and seasonal bounties of land and sea.

Where nature's harmony becomes one's daily lullabies

When staying at Suara Alam Ubud Villa, there's no rush to wake up. Instead of alarm clocks, the only sound coaxing sleepers out of bed is the faint chirping of birds or the gentle stream of a gurgling brook. Sometimes, it's nothing more than the pleasant undulations of leaves rustling in the cool highland breezes. Nothing less is to be expected out of a villa whose name literally means sounds of nature. The design also harmonises with the natural landscapes that surround it, featuring sulur motifs, tendrils of swirling, arabesque patterns commonly found in traditional Indonesian architecture, etched onto its stone walls. Much of its space exists in union with the outdoors, including the doorless spa chamber and the circular and triangular pools that jut out over the leafy ravine. The bedrooms, while indoors, emulate a similar atmosphere with their pristine desert-style interiors in all their plastered, rattan-accented glory. By nightfall, the chitter of cicadas underscores romantic candlelit dinners if guests so wish, a prelude to a good night's sleep that would extend to the next morning's absence of wake-up calls.

Local flavours and traditional techniques form the foundation of TELU's innovative cocktail offerings, creating a three-part menu, each benefitting a different charity: Bali Children's Project, Ocean Gardener, and Sungai Watch. Perched high above the crashing waves of Uluwatu, this open-flame kitchen celebrates the beauty of honest cooking while forging a strong connection to its natural surroundings. Cooking takes place exclusively over coals, allowing the fire and smoke to infuse each dish with complexity and flavour. This thoughtful, unhurried process allows every ingredient to reveal its true character as it develops through heat and time. For instance, the mortadella flatbreads emerge blistered and full of flavour, while skewers of yakitori are meticulously grilled to achieve a perfect balance of char and depth. At the bar, the cocktail programme shares the same passion, with concoctions that are layered, expressive, and delightfully unexpected.

Though more and more restaurants in Bali offer Mediterranean food, Seabird Bistro Canggu finds ways to have fun with the well-beloved fare. Chef Reyno Firmansyah takes the cuisine's many comforts and infuses a sense of playfulness and locality to create the menu here. Remnants of its past life as a French-style bistro are still visible in the interiors and in certain dishes, such as the Seabass Two Ways, which feature the fish sitting on a duo of robust muhamarra and a béarnaise-style Yemenite hot green zhug. Still, for those who seek something more straightforward, there's always a lineup of pastas, breads, and light bites that best showcase Middle Eastern and Italian flavours. Not to be missed is the focaccia, which incorporates house-fermented cassava for a slightly alcoholic twang and a more pillowy bounce. Seabird continues to become a nest for the most playful and curious.

Tsune Japanese Restaurant Sanur integrates the symbolism of the Japanese camellia flower into its foundational essence, drawing from the wabi-sabi philosophy of finding beauty in simplicity and imperfection. It is translated through a practice of transforming locally sourced ingredients through traditional Japanese techniques to create dishes that are uncomplicated yet carry a sense of refined sophistication. Beyond what's on the plate, part of Tsune's charm lies in the dining experience. It flows with an undeniable ease, an ambience echoing its centrepiece. From afar, one might spot the rows of sushi rolls going around the circular bar seating, expecting a typical revolving sushi bar. But grab a seat and discover that the conveyor belt has been replaced with a stream, carrying brightly coloured rolls on delicate wooden boats instead.

Many restaurants in Bali use the Mediterranean label as a shorthand for uninspired regurgitations of simplistic Italian or Pan-European fare. Riverside at Four Seasons Resort Bali at Sayan, however, doesn't fall into the same pit. The menu pays tribute to the sun-drenched flavours of Italy, Spain, France, Lebanon, and Greece, reflecting the warmth and simplicity of Mediterranean dining. Each dish tells a story, evoking the history of the region's maritime trade routes where ingredients and culinary ideas were shared across borders, shaping the rich traditions enjoyed today. The beverage selection is equally thoughtfully curated, featuring a range of wines from Mediterranean vineyards, alongside aromatic cocktails and mocktails. Guests can relax and savour their meal, all against a natural backdrop where the Ayung River flows gently right next to them.

After a successful outpost in Sanur, Seta Coffee makes its way to the highlands of Ubud. It trades the original's coffee studio concept for a hybrid with books, unveiling itself as Seta Coffee Ubud. Still, it doesn't abandon the micro-roastery and café roots that Indonesian architect Jafni Zul Fahmi and Australian coffee maestro Aidan Broderick built. The interiors also respond to Ubud's more natural terrain, swapping out industrial bricks and tiles for woven rattan and tapestry accents. Though the menu is significantly more compact, this sophomore offshoot offers patrons the chance to unwind with a collection of rare books to go with their coffees and light bites.

When two-MICHELIN-starred chef Syrco Bakker chose Bali as the place to build his next chapter, his vision was clear. He wanted to reconnect with what matters most. That vision became Syrço Basè, a conscious dining concept where local products and flavours meet a modern Western approach. Guided by Traceability, Nature, and Transparency, every dish starts with two simple questions: where does it come from, and who is behind it? Local ingredients take centre stage, but they are only one part of the experience. The farmers, fishermen, artisans, and producers behind them are equally important. Known as the Bali Heroes, they help shape every plate, drink, and detail of the guest journey. From line-caught fish to handcrafted ceramics, their stories are woven throughout the experience, which diners can enjoy at the restaurant, which opens Tuesday to Saturday.
